Great Job?

Editor:

I am writing in response to the advertisement placed on page 4 of the June 6 edition stating that "Cal Poly Humboldt President Tom Jackson is doing a great job."

Really? I hope the NCJ netted a few dollars from this ad at least. I totally respect our right to speech. But ...

Who is this person that was silent when students voiced their opinions?

Who is this person that has no voice in our community?

I'm a bit flummoxed to see the signatories of this letter from outside districts. What do you hope to accomplish? I'm watching another school get demolished in Gaza, yet you all wish to shower praise on an absentee university president. Who are you? Why can't we all gather for peace rather than pour more gas on the dry grass out our back doors.

Sam A. Flanagan, Bayside

Editor:

It's hard to believe that 153 individuals, let alone Cal Poly Humboldt alumni, are capable of such egregious factual and mathematical errors claiming, "... less than 100 students disrupted the education of more than 5,000 students!" (The "Cal Poly Humboldt President Tom Jackson is doing a great job" ad on page 4 of the June 6 NCJ.)

In fact, it was Mr. Jackson who closed the campus and it was the student protesters at CPH and abroad educating hundreds of millions by finally breaking self-censorship of university investments in U.S. weapon's manufactures and Israeli industries profiteering from the apartheid and genocide of Palestinian civilians, still killing children since last October, totaling more than 15,000.

It is not too much to demand CPH President and military veteran Tom Jackson to first exhaust diplomatic engagement with

Discovering Juneteenth

A white woman,
I had learned
the history of horrors:
grisly holds of jammed slave ships,
cruel auctions of black families torn apart,
picnics at lynchings of castrated bodies.

Then at seventy-five
I learned, dismayed, that it took two full years for news of Lincoln's proclamation to reach slaves in Texas, not knowing they were free until
June 19, 1865.

Seventy-five before I learned of what has been Blacks'secret holiday,

his "campus community" prior to a costly campus closure and authoritarian call for a costly multi-agency paramilitary response to minor property damage.

Offering to review investments and disassociate CPH from companies and governments actively involved in facilitating the Palestinian genocide would have enabled a voluntary end to students' protest.

Multi-day Juneteenth Event Celebrates a ‘Liberated Future’ of Unity and Diversity

By Kelby McIntosh

After spending four years celebrating Juneteenth with events aimed at educating the local community, Black Humboldt is shifting its focus to a broader theme of celebrating the Black experience. “Our very first Juneteenth, we just had to have our Black partners trust us, that this is what Black communities did,” says Monique Harper-Desir, the nonprofit’s co-founder. “[When] we brought [Juneteenth] here, people were like, ‘We don’t know what this is.’”

Since Black Humboldt’s founding in 2018, the organization has been working to build unity through community events like Juneteenth, and next week it will host the fifth annual festival, holding events and gatherings across Humboldt, including Fortuna, Eureka and Arcata, to commemorate the freeing of slaves.

Juneteenth is a national holiday celebrating the day the U.S. fully recognized that freedom, and dates to June 19, 1865, when Union soldiers, led by Maj. Gen.

Gordon Granger, arrived in Galveston, Texas, with news that the war had ended and that the enslaved were free. President Abraham Lincoln had signed the Emancipation Proclamation on Jan. 1, 1863, but due to the resistance of slave owners and a resulting delay in spreading the news, many slaves didn’t know they were free until two and a half years later.

“I think it really represents how little this country has cared about African people or people descended from Africa that two years could pass,” Harper-Desir says, adding the hope is this year’s festival will continue progress in the face of adversity, noting, “This year’s multicultural event focuses on the theme of ‘visions of a liberated future.’”

Having lived in Humboldt for nine years, Harper-Desir, like many Black transplants who relocated to the area, says she found refuge in Humboldt County’s natural beauty and rural quietness — a place the opposite of her previous home in New York City. But she was confronted with the stark reality of the lack of Black representation within the community.

According to the U.S. Census, Black people make up less than 2 percent of Humboldt's population in a county that's still 82 percent white. (Nationally, Black people make up 14 percent of the population.)

The holiday is increasingly important and empowering to Black communities throughout the United States, including those in Humboldt County.

Eureka NAACP President Kintay Johnson says it speaks to the local need for a Juneteenth event that it has survived, despite being started during the pandemic.

"It brings to the forefront the work that Black Humboldt does," Johnson says. "It's an opportunity to learn, but also celebrate each other."

Organizers of this year's event say its theme was born from the organization's belief in co-habitation and all-inclusive togetherness. "We're really trying to create that sense of community and belonging, and that we're all interconnected," Harper-Desir says.

The multi-day celebration will take place Wednesday, June 19, through Saturday, June 22, offering a variety of events accessible to community members of varying ages and income levels.

Black Humboldt also changed the tabling rules this year so organizations that provide a resource that's available and of benefit to the Black community can table and share information in exchange for a $50 donation.

"It gives people that don't belong to the Black community a chance to see our community in action, that connection and what it looks like when we come together," says Harper-Desir.

The four-day celebration is designed to offer something for everyone, kicking off with the Juneteenth Hip-hop Show at RampArt in Arcata on Wednesday, which will start with a free family fun time at 4 p.m. before a paid concert starts at 8:30 p.m., featuring musical acts including Krayzie Bone, Sloan Bone and EmCee Radio Active. The Cal Poly Humboldt Black Student Union BBQ will offer free food and refreshments from 3 to 7 p.m. the following day at Jefferson Park in Eureka before a 21-and-over Juneteenth Karaoke Takeover begins at Richard's Goat Tavern and Tea Room at 8 p.m., with costumes and themed outfits "highly encouraged." An open mic and art night at Eureka's Friday Night Market at the Old Town gazebo is free and begins at 5 p.m. Also on Friday night, the festival will host a Juneteenth Family Skate Night at Fortuna's Rohner Park from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

But the main attraction is the Multicultural Festival on Saturday, June 22, which will feature various educational opportunities, like a yoga class at 10:30 a.m. and a "Back to the Land Movement" workshop at 2:30 p.m., both at Adorni Center in Eureka. But Harper-Desir says organizers tried to "limit the number of speeches and focus more on the celebration."

you go to the Juneteenth festival, and you just have fun," she says, noting this is a departure from previous local Juneteenth events. "The goal with our very first one, we were going to fill the park with Black-owned businesses and Black artists. There just wasn't many of us even calling ourselves a small business, and now we have over 22 businesses this year."

Harper-Desir says organizers also have been intentional about who they choose to platform and why.

"We're having this local band called Object Heavy," Harper-Desir says of the group scheduled to take the stage of 6 p.m. at Eureka's Halvorsen Park on June 22. "The lead singer is this lovely Black man ... the community loves Object Heavy. We brought the House of Marc Jacobs up because we've got a little like Pride. Every time we platform someone we're hoping that someone with more resources and access than Black Humboldt will say, 'Oh dang, I love this artist! I want to book them at my event or whatever it might be.'"

On the Black Humboldt website under the "Juneteenth celebration 2024" tab, vendors, local performers and volunteers, can sign up to be a part of the festival. Johnson, who noted he appreciates the city of Eureka's efforts to reduce red tape and make the events possible, says he hopes folks will come out and participate.

"Though we know it's a federal holiday, don't just take the day off — use that time to attend the event to learn and educate yourself," he says, noting that he's lived in Humboldt for more than 20 years and he's excited to see organizations tailor services and events for the local Black community. "This is something that is new for Humboldt."

Harper-Desir says she hopes people leave the events with a fuller picture of the Black experience and what's possible within it.

"I really hope they understand and grasp how many different types of Blackness there are, but some people think there's one way to being Black," she says. "Even Black folks think that, and we take [that] to heart at Black Humboldt. We're hoping that at this event, people are like, 'Wow, this is the future I see for myself as a community member myself, as an ally, and all the ways that the Black community is building.'"

Journal Named Finalist for State, National Awards

The North Coast Journal has been named a finalist in eight categories in the 2023 statewide California Journalism Awards, as well one category in the national Association of Alternative Newsmedia awards.

The California Journalism Awards are bestowed annually by the California Newspaper Association, which was founded in 1888 and has more than 500 member papers throughout the state. The awards contest is judged by volunteers from member newspapers' newsrooms, with the top five submissions receiving honors and the winner announced at an event next month.

The Association of Alternative News-media awards, meanwhile, have been held annually since 1996, with judging done by a "a panel of distinguished industry experts and academics" who evaluate each submission's "journalistic integrity, originality, impact and contribution."

The Journal's submissions receiving recognition this year reflect the hard work of not just the editorial and design teams that produced them, but the entire North Coast Journal Inc., which works daily to put out two weekly newspapers and a variety of special publications. The honors also reflect the support of Journal readers and advertisers, who enable all we do.

With all that said, here's a look at finalist submissions that will be in the running for top honors next month.

California Journalism Awards

Coverage of Local Government — Digital Editor Kimberly Wear's "A Symbolic Gesture," detailing the unprecedented legal and constitutional questions surrounding Arcata's Measure M, which sought to put the Earth flag atop all others on city property.

A&E Coverage — Arts and Features Editor Jennifer Fumiko Cahill's "Drag for the Next Generation," an exploration of the purpose and power of all-ages drag shows as they continued in the face of local and national backlash.

Community Calendar — Calendar Editor Kali Cozyris' weekly eight-day calendar of local events, which spotlights a few while offering the most comprehensive local listings in Humboldt (and possibly the state).

Profile Story — News Editor Thadeus Greenon's story "When the Lord Restored Our Fortunes," a profile detailing the mission, capture and liberation of Jeffery Woodke, a local missionary who was kidnapped and held hostage in Western Africa for six years, five months and five days.

Writing — Cahill's editorial "Lessons of a Drag Hag" explaining the way drag has changed her perspective on life and community, teaching her "how to love your community harder than anyone can hate it."

General Excellence — The Journal was named a finalist in this category based on its performance in other judging categories, as well as its complete issues from Jan. 12 and Jan. 19, 2023.

Environmental Reporting — Greenon's "Undamming (and Restoring) the Klamath," explaining the nuts and bolts of the largest dam removal project in United States history, as well as plans to restore the Klamath River basin to its natural state.

Informational Graphic — Production Manager Holly Harvey's map depicting California prison case reviews under a pilot prosecutor-led resentencing program, and how Humboldt County's three cases reviewed out of a possible 393 at the time fell far behind the programs' other eight counties.

Association of Alternative News Media

Investigative Reporting — Greenon's "The Soeth Files," which used internal affairs investigative reports, video footage obtained through a public records lawsuit and witness accounts to detail a local deputy's track record of questionable uses of force and misleading statements. This story has already received a Free Speech and Open Government Award from the First Amendment Coalition, as well as a James Madison Freedom of Information Award from the Northern California chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists.

Harvest Hub bridges the gap between farms and tables

Michael Peterson and his son Nicolas are unloading pillowcase-sized bags of purple Brussels sprouts from their Willow Creek Farm truck. There are boxes of pale green bok choy and sacks of rainbow carrots, too, stacked up outside the entrance to the Harvest Hub run by the North Coast Growers Association (NCGA) on West End Road in Arcata. All of it is already spoken for, with somewhere to go from here. Some is headed for the menu of the South G Kitchen food truck, and some will wind up in kids' lunches at Coastal Grove and Burnt Ranch schools. The bulk is headed for Food for People's open pantry for those in need. But the Petersons needn't haul the food to all those buyers, nor will they have to follow up for payment.

Standing to the side, Harvest Hub Director of Cooperative Distribution Megan Kenney looks on like a child watching birthday presents being stacked, a wave of brown hair cresting over her glasses. Under the umbrella of the NCGA and a steering committee of stakeholders, she's shepherded the Harvest Hub program through its development into a nonprofit intermediary between producers and buyers, connecting local farms to some 18 schools, a handful of restaurants and a growing number of people facing food insecurity.

At a long stainless-steel table in late winter, volunteer Robyn Gorecki weighs potatoes from Wild Rose Farm and places them into open paper bags. She also adds apples, mung beans, Brussels sprouts, leeks and winter squash to be delivered to the 100 or so participants in the Harvest Box program, a kind of CSA box that draws from 40 participating farms. For $25, people who might not otherwise have access to farmers market produce due to disability, transportation or juggling care for young children can get a half-dozen kinds of fruits and vegetables delivered to them for a rate equal or lesser than the farmers market price. And delivery by the program's van means fewer cars on the road and fewer emissions.

"It's kind of the gateway," says Kenney, explaining how farmers who sign up with the Harvest Box program can learn the ropes of all the protocols involved in supplying farmers markets, schools, restaurants and grocery stores, independently or through the Harvest Hub. That might mean laying out safety and irrigation plans, and equipment cleaning protocols, or tracking and tracing produce for potential recalls. Kenney and other staff and volunteers are on hand to walk them through the requirements, opening up possibilities for selling to more and larger buyers than a stall on the Arcata Plaza affords.

Once the produce is dropped off at the hub, farmers bring invoices to the bookkeeper, who tallies up single bulk payments each week, covering combined sales to all the restaurants, schools and grocers who ordered. It's a good deal simpler for farmers than invoicing individual restaurants, sometimes for a single $30 case of product at a time, and chasing down small payments all over the county. It's easier, too, if a buyer doesn't pay their bill for any reason. "We have an insurance policy," says Kenney, which covers the organization for unpaid bills. Unlike smaller, less established farms that might not be able to make payroll if accounts don't pay up or are delayed, "we have a little cushion and grant money to pay some of our employees," says Kenney. "So it's not as huge a hit as if a farmer doesn't get a $1,000 payment, especially for farms in their first five years, where everything is in $10 increments."

Once Kenney gets a list of what's coming in from the farms, the available inventory is posted on the Harvest Hub website. Wholesale buyers can log in from Monday afternoon until Wednesday morning to order beef or mushrooms by the pound, and daikon and rainbow chard by the case, from a number of farms. Then, they can pay for it all in one place. The site has information on farms, as well, like whether they're certified organic like Willow Creek Farm, low-till and oxen-powered like Shakefork Farm, or practice low-stress cattle handling like Bear River Valley Beef.

Once the last orders are in Wednesday morning, farmers get individualized lists of which produce and how much of it they need to bring to their scheduled weekly drop-off at Harvest Hub. Every crown of broccoli already has a place to go, whether that's a cafeteria or restaurant kitchen, or to feed those coping with food insecurity. No leftovers.

At Willow Creek Farm, Michael Peterson says he's just started picking zucchini, while carrots, beets and corn are still a few weeks away. "I like a field tomato, I'll take a bite and throw it over my shoulder for luck," he says. He also likes being on the farm, planting, harvesting and planning crop rotations for his 17 acres. "I would like to cut back on the amount of time I spend away from the farm," he says. "And the hub does that for me."

"The convenience of the drop-off is that it's all consolidated. I can go there and unload a pallet," Peterson continues, noting it saves him the time and fuel expense of making deliveries around the county. The ordering system also frees him from substantial marketing duties. "It saves me all the effort of keeping in touch with all the [consumers]," and reaching out to new ones beyond his core wholesalers. "Markets that we didn't know existed are now asking us for product" via Harvest Hub's online ordering system, he says. "What it boils down to is you got the schools, the restaurants, the little mom-and-pop places, and they can get the list of what's available each week."

Especially in winter, Peterson says the farm has often produced more than the county could absorb, so he's sold his vegetables through Bay Area wholesalers, like Veritable Vegetable, before they went overripe. But Veritable Vegetable draws from geographically broader markets, he says, putting Willow Creek Farm up against "megafarms" and high-production outfits in Southern California, which can be tough to beat on price. This year, however, "Because there was more demand locally [through Harvest Hub], I didn't have to go out of the area." That, he says, means a break for him in terms of delivery cost and time, as well as his vegetables' carbon footprint when sold through out of area wholesalers, noting, "There's product that goes all the way to San Francisco and then it comes back up to Eureka."

Selling through Harvest Hub has also been fairly easy for Peterson, who finds his farm's name carries more weight with buyers here in Humboldt. He says the transition to using the hub's ordering system has been smooth, and the community of buyers and producers has been welcoming and supportive. "Megan is just a go-getter — she's just been awesome to work with," he says.

Ed Cohen, owner of Earthly Edibles, farms his "30-ish acres" in Korb. If you're eating organic broccoli from a local market right now, it's probably from his farm. Cohen is a longtime member of NCGA and a member of the Harvest Hub's steering committee. "The hub is playing a cool part where they're reaching a lot of small places ... and they're giving newer, younger farms an opportunity," he says. Earthly Edibles is among the producers on the Harvest Hub website, having signed on as soon as it was up and running, and Cohen makes weekly drop-offs, same as many other farmers. But as a larger farm with larger grocery store accounts separate from Harvest Hub, Earthly Edibles has different needs.

"I'm a local high-production organic farm," he says. "Around here, there's probably three or four of us [of similar size] that produce a lot for local stores and markets ... and we are basically shadowing each other, going to the same stores and restaurants."

He's long hoped to come together to organize a shared delivery truck — much larger than Harvest Hub's current delivery van — to accommodate larger farms and cut back on time, cost and carbon output for all of them. It wouldn't be cheap, he admits, but it would reduce the number of vehicles on the road and farmers' costs. "It would just allow us to spend more quality time on the farm or with our families," he says, noting, "I'm relatively close but it's still a full day delivering" during the busy season.

"We're still in the infancy of what the hub is going to be," he says, adding, "Megan is an amazing woman who's heading this up ... so I think it's going to happen; it's just not going to happen overnight."

Daniel Emmenecker, co-owner of South G Kitchen, is one of the customers waiting for deliveries from Harvest Hub. He'd heard about the Harvest Boxes, and he knew Kenney from Redwood Curtain Brewery, where the South G Kitchen truck and its upscale pub fare are fixtures. "The moment I could start ordering, I started ordering immediately," he says, beginning with winter Brussels sprouts, shitake mush-

What Should I know About COVID-19?

One of a series of four

How safe are COVID-19 vaccines?

Over 189 million people in the US - from 12-year-olds up to adults - have received COVID-19 vaccines in over 357 million doses. Evidence shows that the COVID-19 vaccines are safe and effective, and that side effects are rare and mild; and there are no known serious, long-term side-effects.

What about new variants?

Should I wait?

With more people vaccinated fewer variants can develop. Our current vaccines are safe and effective against COVID-19, though we may need boosters or new vaccines to tackle new variants. Getting vacci-nated is the best way to prevent COVID-19 infection, hospitalization, and long-term health impacts. Ask your provider about making the best choice for you and your family right now.

Waste & Recycling Workers Week

June 17-21, 2024

Waste & Recycling Workers Week is a week-long celebration honoring the individuals in the waste and recycling industry for their hard work and dedication. HWMA applauds the role its staff and other local contractors play in providing efficient reliable waste and recycling services to Humboldt County households and businesses.

rooms, Little River Farm pea shoot greens, daikon, bok choy and heirloom carrots. "It's exciting because every week I jump on [the website] and there's always new things. ... Everybody isn't supposed to have everything all the time." His enthusiasm for local produce led him to a spot on the Harvest Hub steering committee and he's hopeful about its long-term impact.

"Honestly, I think it's the best thing in Humboldt County, this focusing on our food system ... this is what's going to uplift the farmers in our area," Emmenecker says. The mutual support between entrepreneurs and farmers, he says, "is part of the reason why I live here."

Without the hub, Emmenecker explains, outside of the farmers market, he'd have to take time to visit the farmers themselves or, without access to a local wholesale distributor, shoulder the added expense of going through a local retailer. The latter, he says, is unlikely to pencil out with the already slim profit margins of a restaurant business. He had been ordering organic produce from the Bay Area's Veritable Vegetable, but he prefers to support local growers and says he's getting better product at similar cost. (Brussels sprouts, it turns out, are seldom improved by the round-trip journey.) "To source local produce, it's hard, it's expensive, it's a huge endeavor."

Small wonder then that ordering ingredients from a corporation like Sysco appeals to so many restaurant owners whose budgets are already stretched thin.

"A lot of people complain about the food and quality here, but I think we need to fix the food system and then the food culture here," Emmenecker says, noting that bridging the gap between local farmers and commercial kitchens, as Harvest Hub does, is a start. "I hope everybody else gets on board."

According to Kenney, NCGA member Woody Ryno Farms owners Chris and Amber Ryno first posed the possibility of a food hub at a regular meeting. Shortly after, Kenney got a primer on food hubs at a conference. Her experience in the food industry, both in a restaurant and at Tomaso's, gave her some familiarity with distribution challenges. "I was like, 'Oh my god, this is exactly it,'" she says. "The pandemic sort of kicked it into high gear because shelves were empty but there were no shortages at the farmers market." The missing connections between local producers and local buyers and consumers was laid bare. It also highlighted the need to prepare for emergencies — like the weather, power and other calamities that can hit isolated areas like Humboldt extra hard — that might disrupt supply chains and block the transportation of food to and from the remote North Coast.

The next step was finding a location. "My husband and I would be driving by abandoned buildings and I'd be like, 'That could be a food hub,” Kenney says, laughing a little at her own single-mindedness.

The space that became the hub is 6,000 square feet, the former home of Humboldt Farms cannabis processing, though not all of it is taken up by Harvest Hub. NCGA’s headquarters are upstairs, as are the offices of Natural Decadence, Humboldt Made and Ashley’s Seafood, as well as the Open Door Community Health and Wellness Garden Program. There’s also a kitchen the NCGA hopes to convert into a space for cooking classes and demonstrations.

Downstairs, there’s a 38 degree cold storage room, a serendipitous relic of the former cannabis business that allows the hub to hold produce to be shipped out. It is also occasionally used to help producers, who might not have access to such a facility, store their crops longer for farmers market sale. Earlier in the year, Crazy River Ranch, for example, had a corner stacked with apples in boxes. “Normally, they’d be done with their season,” says Kenney, but the cold storage allowed the farm to keep apples fresh for sale. As the early summer season picks up, more and more fruits and vegetables will crowd the room.

While restaurants and grocers are perhaps some of the first businesses that come to mind as destinations for wholesale local produce, institutions like schools are where the volume is at. Kenney says she expected plenty of red tape, but was pleasantly surprised by how ready local schools were to connect with Harvest Hub and its associated farmers.

Eureka City Schools’ eight school sites, charter schools and educational facilities serve three meals a day: totaling roughly 1,050 breakfasts, 1,800 lunches and 600 after school supper program meals, according to Food Services Director Kevin Ralston. “Eureka City Schools has always been pretty good about reaching out to local partners,” he says, including Earthly Edibles and Clendenen’s Cider Works. But when COVID threw schools and their meal programs into chaos, new protocols meant switching to sealed, pre-packaged food. He says the schools were slowly reintegrating fresh produce, “Then suddenly with Harvest Hub, we have access to all the local farms.” He says there was little if any resistance to using the program from the school board and the response has been positive.

That includes the response from the kids. Golden beets roasted as a side dish at the high school were a surprise hit. ECS is looking at new USDA-approved recipes to make the most of local kale, quinoa and beets this winter, too. “We want to use them [Harvest Hub] as much as we can all year round,” Ralston says.

“It’s worth it to spend a little more,” says Ralston. “The quality is fantastic, the relationships that we’re building are great ... everything coming off the truck is organic and that’s an improvement.” An added bonus to featuring fresh fruit and vegetables has been “folding in that educational component,” he says, showing kids “this is what an organic vegetable tastes like.” For the coming school year, Eureka City Schools applied for a farm-to-school grant that Ralston hopes will pay for events like farmer visits, tastings and field trips to partner farm sites. “The full food cycle is what we’re shooting for,” he says, noting Harvest Hub is listed as primary purchasing partner on the application along with an organization called Grow Together that manages the school garden at Alice Birney Elementary School.

Stella Swenson, kitchen manager at Coastal Grove Charter School, is similarly enthusiastic about sourcing produce through Harvest Hub. But in contrast to large purchasers like Eureka City Schools, Coastal Grove serves some 150 kids lunch per day. “It’s been amazing. They’ve made it very easy for us. The website is very easy to use. We just get on there, pick what we want to use for the following week and order it. The school’s menu is largely from scratch, so the fresh produce is vital, and the feedback on the resulting meals has been overwhelmingly positive.

Before Harvest Hub, Swenson says Coastal Grove’s kitchen ordered through Veritable Vegetable. “It’s definitely been nice to hone into the local produce here,” she says. Students appreciate the fresh produce, too, she adds. “I can tell the difference when I eat strawberries that were picked yesterday as opposed to ones picked a week ago, and I think they can, too.”

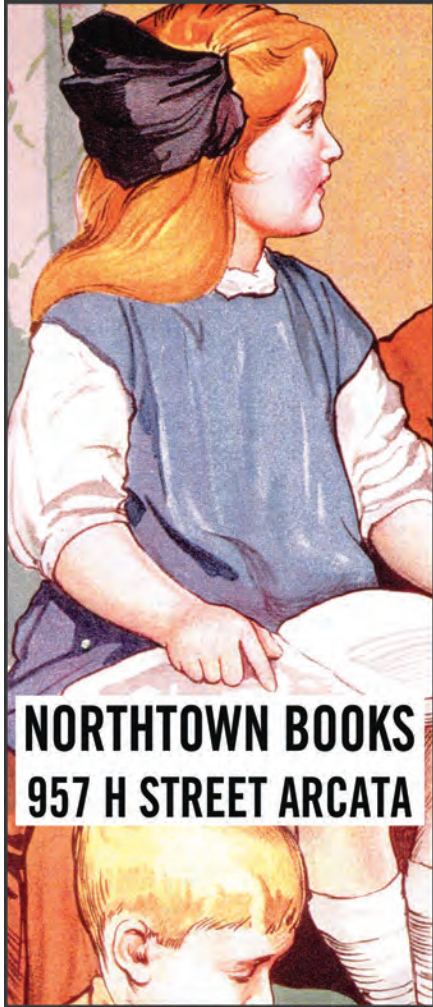

As Food for People’s local food resources coordinator, Allison Kenney (no relation to Meghan) runs the nonprofit’s gleaning program, picking up and distributing excess produce from farmers’ fields, unsolds from markets, and fruits and vegetables from individuals whose gardens and trees runneth over. As closely as she works with NCGA and its members, it’s not surprising she’s also part of the Harvest Hub’s steering committee.

Previously, on top of its gleaning program, Food for People ordered produce for its food pantry from individual farmers. The organization was an early adopter of Harvest Hub’s service and Allison Kenney says, despite some clunkiness in the beginning, it’s been a boon for her organization. “It really streamlines things instead of having six different farmers coming in.” Food for People, she says, also received $200,000 in federal assistance funds for produce purchased through an aggregation center, and Harvest Hub fits that bill. There’s fluctuation week to week depending on what’s available but since December, Food for People has received more than 34,400 pounds of local produce through the hub. The only downside she can think of is personal, saying with a sigh and a smile in her voice, “I miss chitchatting with the farmers, calling and texting with them ... just getting to catch up with the farmers.”

“There’s a lot of potential there for future partnerships, not just with our organization, but with others,” says Allison Kenney. “I think it’s a really great thing that was lacking here in Humboldt.” ●

Banning Plastics and Bioplastics at Oyster Fest

By Sasha Love

If each of the more than 12,000 people in attendance at Arcata Bay Oyster Festival restrained themselves to only two orders of grilled Pacifics served with disposable forks, 24,000 sets of plastic prongs would likely make their way to landfill. Events of such a scale not only create a lively community, but also literal tons of waste. Even bioplastics made of natural materials designed to decompose don't always break down quickly enough, leading to challenges when composters turn their waste into soil.

To help reduce the amount of garbage at this year's festival, the Arcata Chamber of Commerce and Bright and Green — a local business encouraging sustainable dishware for events — have joined forces. Organizers are banning all types of single-use plastics, including bioplastics, ensuring all cups and dishes at the 2024 Oyster Festival are locally compostable.

"Events can be one of the biggest waste drivers for our community and we want to have a good reputation with keeping everything clean," Gloria Baker, operations and events manager for Arcata Chamber of Commerce, said. "I think [banning all plastics] is important because it kind of puts us in a position, being one of the largest events in Arcata, to influence others to do the same thing."

Leading up to the decision to ban bioplastics, Bright and Green Director Carly Tambling researched options for composting bioplastics locally. She discovered that because they didn't decompose as quickly or thoroughly as advertised, some of them had to be sorted out and sent to the landfill, and only certain types of bioplastics could be composted.

That said, Lloyd and Stacey Barker from Local Worm Guy, the team responsible for handling Oyster Festival waste, believe using bioplastics is still much better than relying on regular plastics. "As much as [bioplastics] cause us some difficulties in a production sense, I think in a global sense they are a much better alternative to regular plastics. I don't want them to be too vilified because, realistically, if we are going to use plastic, bioplastic is a much better alternative," Lloyd Barker said. He says while it's not a perfect solution, it's not without some promise.

He estimates that roughly 90 percent of bioplastic bags decompose, whereas only around 10 percent of bioplastic cutlery breaks down in a reasonable amount of time for his composting system. Even though bioplastics are designed to decompose alongside food and plant waste, there is significant variation in their effectiveness.

When available, Lloyd Barker encourages plant and bamboo products and reusable alternatives.

Bright and Green's approach to sustainability at the festival is multi-faceted. The company will sell and promote reusable dishware at the event, but also work with vendors to build a comprehensive guide to compostable products. "For the waste reduction management, we work really, really closely with the vendors in order to manage waste and reduce it," Tambling said, adding that work begins "months and months" before the event.

Instead of sipping from single-use plastics, festival-goers must bring their own cups, or buy stainless steel or hard plastic cups on the plaza from Bright and Green. "We weren't prepared to go with reusable everything this year, but we did make a huge step in banning bioplastics so all cups are reusable," Tambling said. And those 24,000 forks won't pile up in a landfill.

Combined, these efforts substantially impact waste reduction. Local Worm Guy processed a massive amount of compost at last year's Oyster Festival and may see even more this year. "Last year, Local Worm Guy took home 10 cubic yards of compost," Tambling said. "That's all waste diverted [from landfills]. That's adding extra value to the community."

Oyster Fest isn't the only local event reducing waste this year. Bright and Green provides a reusable exchange program for dishware at many smaller events. "Right now, we're doing a pilot program with the farmers market," Tambling said. "[At] the farmers market, a lot of the vendors have reusable cups and cutlery and right next to the trash cans we have a place where you can drop them off." Customers can take the green-colored dishware from vendors and replace it when done with their meal. If everything goes as planned, a similar system could be implemented at larger festivals in the future.

The community can help reduce waste at the Oyster Fest, too. If you volunteer as a Trash Talker, you can help guide festival-goers in sorting their waste into the correct bins, reducing the workload of dividing compost, recycling and trash later. Sign up to be a Trash Talker at m.signupgenius.com/#/showSignUp/10C0B49AFAF28A-2FACE9-48293090-zero. Volunteers will receive two drink tickets and a meal ticket. ●

A New Season and New Conference for the Crabs

By Brandon Dixon

Like a lot of people, I drive by the empty Arcata Ball Park in the winter months, longing for sunny days at the yard. The Crab Grass Band plays in my head with the cheers of “Tip Tip Hooray,” the chanting of “Nanananana BATBOY!” and even our famous hecklers. The promise of summer and Humboldt Crabs baseball brings a smile. Last Friday night, on the final day of May, the North Coast’s greatest show on dirt returned for a landmark 80th season and our Crabbies did not disappoint.

Returning for his third year with the team, McKinleyville’s own Cameron Saso started on the mound. Pitching on opening night, in front of family and friends at the ballpark he grew up going to, Saso threw five shutout innings and picked up the first win of the summer. He did it in front of a crowd full of kids like he used to be. How can you not be romantic about baseball?

And with that, the 80th season was underway. The Crabs, who usually play independently and host a variety of teams from California, Oregon and Washington are now a part of the Pacific Empire Conference and will participate in conference play with hopes of winning a championship this summer. They will be taking on the Lincoln Pot- ters, the Medford Rogues, the West Coast Kings, the Healdsburg Prune Packers, and the Solano Mudcats. When asked about the new schedule, pitching coach Eric Giacone, who returns for his 11th season, acknowledged it would present some new challenges. “I think it will be more competitive, for sure. We used to have a series or two in a row with competitive teams, then a few where we’d cruise — that won’t be the case this summer. I see Healdsburg and Medford are off to great starts. Once we get into conference play, it should be a grind every night.”

The Crabs will still host a robust home schedule, which was a concern for locals who are used to the slates of the past, but there will be a couple roadtrips. This just means fewer off days and the inevitable dog days of summer for a team full of players who have already played a full college season. After getting through what is always a whirlwind first week, head coach Robin Guiver is ready to settle in and get in the swing of the summer. “With the college playoffs wrapping up, we still have four or five guys that will be joining the team in the coming weeks to get us to full strength. We have a couple of arms that will really add depth and round out our pitching staff, which will be great because we are not going to have a lot of days off. We are still piecing things together, trying to define roles and really just settle in. Guys are learning about the town, where to get groceries, food, new weather, learn each other, so that’s all just part of the first week.”

Giacone echoed his head coach’s sentiments, saying, “It’s just about the guys settling in and coming together.”

The first few games were a mixed bag for the Crabs and, after dropping Friday’s series opener to the Fresno A’s 6-2, they found themselves sitting at 3-2 to start the season with two pivotal and tone setting games remaining in the weekend. On Saturday night, the bats would come alive. The Crabs put up 11 runs on 13 hits behind early season offensive stand-out Javier Felix. Felix, who already has a bit of a blue collar cult following for sporting one farming glove instead of batting gloves, further endeared himself to the Crabs’ faithful with a three-hit, five-RBI performance that featured his second homerun of the summer. Troy Harding added three hits and four RBIs to pace the good guys and provide more than enough insurance for starting pitcher Caleb Ruiz, who would dominate for six frames, allowing one run and striking out eight. Hayden Bode took the ball from there striking out five, while allowing just one run over three innings of relief.

The bullpen has been a big bright spot early on and will likely be leaned upon this summer with the new schedule and format. With players coming to the Crabs after a full season already, fatigue and player safety are factors, especially with pitchers. “Priorities 1, 2 and 3 with me are getting players home and back to their schools healthy and ready to go for next season,” said Giacone. “But I think we have a lot of great depth, and we still have a few showing up. Our bullpen has been great and, besides an inning or two, so have the starters.”

Sunday’s action would not disappoint. Near perfect weather and a large crowd sprinkled with fairy dust from the Fairy Festival on the plaza would pave the way for another offensive explosion from the Crabs. Javier Felix continued his hot start with two more hits and an RBI. Billy Ham had two hits, including a double and two RBIs, and sweet-swinging lefty Trent Keys got on the board with his first homerun of the summer. Starting pitcher Nolan Long would do what all good starters do; after giving up a run and dodging some bullets in the first two frames, Long settled in and got better as he went, carving up the Fresno lineup while striking out six batters over five solid innings. The southpaw picked up his second win of the summer following last week’s win against Seals Baseball, in which he gave up one run over five innings while striking out seven. He’s dealing, folks.

The Crabbies are back in action this week against Berkovich Honor before starting a weekend set with the Novato Knicks. All game times are at 6:30 p.m., with the exception of the Sunday, June 16 (Tie-Dye Day), day game, which will start at 12:30 p.m. The Crabs hit the road after that, so make sure to get out to the yard this week.

Heckles of the Week

To a curly-haired opposing pitcher: “You look like a poodle,” and, “You look like you wear cargo shorts.”

To No. 5 on the Fresno A’s n second base: “Five, your fly is down!” and, “Made you look Five!”

Welcome back and go Crabs, go.

Aldous Huxley had a regular column in Esquire Magazine in the mid-1950s where he once observed, “The most distressing thing that can happen to a prophet is to be proved wrong; the next most distressing thing is to be proved right.” He was revisiting the legacy of his novel A Brave New World during the oozing aftermath of the McCarthy era and the emerging age of the Beats. A pivotal influence on our most secular century, the 20th, Huxley wasn’t a prophet in the biblical sense but he was tuned-in, and it’s worth noting that he succumbed to his cancer — fortified with injections of LSD — on the same day that John F. Kennedy and C.S. Lewis also died. I don’t know what any of that means cosmically, but I’m using it as a tool to say my own thinking has changed. I now accept a confluence between the spiritual and the material that exists like a river that disappears underground. I don’t need to figure out its unknown destination, hearing the flow is good enough for now.

Thursday

The Basement is once again the place to be when it comes to pre-gaming for the coming end of the work week. Tonight, the doors open at 7 p.m., and sometime after that you will find a performance by one of our county’s more unique and industrious gigging acts, the Blueberry Hill Boogie Band. If you know, you know, and if you don’t, this one’s free to get in.

Friday

The Outer Space is throwing a show tonight at 8 p.m., headlined by a new favorite band of mine, the funk and dance, honkin’ squawkers Hermit Crab. Also on the bill are spoken word artist Dylan Collins, dark folk act Tsung and a performance art/electro drone group called KMRO, which stands for “Karma Means Revolutionary Overthrow.” And while that declaration seems to me to be wallowing in the contradictions of spiritual materialism more than moving in action based on dialectical historical measures, I’m willing to keep an open mind if you are. Entrance to this all-ages, sober space show is $5-$20 but nobody will be told to scatter because of a lack of cash-ola.

Saturday

Every so often I get to hop up on the table and cause a little ruckus by kicking off the cutlery and breaking some dinnerware in the service of crowing about a can’t-miss, great show put on by artists from the misty lost days in my old home of New Orleans. Tonight is just such a hoedown, because one of the most strange and fantastic duos from the 504 are playing in the 707. I am, of course, talking about the Quintron and Miss Pussycat show at the Miniplex at 9 p.m. ($20, $15). Come hear Q’s homemade drum machines and bespoke electronic Wurlitzer warlock whirlpools of glorious sound spun around the supernatural puppetry theatrics of Miss P. Delightful nighttime antics spin and crackle in my cherished memories from the Spellcaster Lodge, pre-Katrina times of my wild youth. These two are living treasures of the world, and their place in the epicenter home of the greats of my favorite city in the universe is as certain as the restless weight of the Mississippi River. Stop reading this babble and go see them!

Sunday

The Shanty knows about putting on great shows largely because the good people there don’t have to, it is secondary to the function of the place as one of the best bars in California (I’m dead serious). So when there is a show happening, it’s done for all the right reasons, without the desperation of a venue undercutting the fun. Bartender Nick Nava is celebrating his 55th with a barbecue and metal show, and he wants me to tell you all about it, which I am thrilled to do. San Francisco thrashers Molten, featuring long time bay-bay scene regular, guitarist Chris Corona, will be shredding the stage with local pit warriors Death Doula. It’s a bar-time matinee with a 4 p.m. start and no cover needed to get in on the fun. Just do me a favor: Make the birthday boy feel like a king for the day and give the musicians as good as they give back. Fun, fun, fun.

With so much else going on this week, I think I’ll pause the show to celebrate the music of another star who departed last year. Jean Knight was a soul and R&B singer whose big voice and bold phrasing belied her humble Catholic upbringing in New Orleans. If you have heard her sing — and you have very probably heard her sing — it was on the 1971 Stax Records smash hit “Mr. Big Stuff,” sourced from the album of the same name. That record is a great starting point for the uninitiated, and its strutting declaration of empowered lady funk is a fine place to pull up a quick sidebar about the keys-player and producer. Wardell Quezergue was one of the great geniuses of the Crescent City, a fellow whose ability to translate the vastness of NOLA’s musical forms into his own effortless language is comparable to what Shakespeare did with Elizabethan English. Known by many as “the Creole Beethoven,” Quezergue produced and played funk, jazz, R&B with the casual ease of a master. He wrote orchestral music, too, true to his own birthright. If you can find a copy of his A Creole Mass, you will hear localized religious devotion in the same vibe as Athena was revered in ancient Athens.

At 8 p.m. this evening at the Miniplex, a very interesting and talented experimental instrumental trio will be playing on the screen-backed stage. Guitarist Bill Orcutt, saxophonist and composer Zoh Amba and drummer Chris Corsano are the members. They each contain enough brilliance to be memorialized forever on one of those music recordings we throw into the goodie bag on a deep space probe destined for a Hail Mary trajectory into the eternal vacuum in search of intelligent life beyond the beyond. Together, they made an album from a session last summer called The Flower School that is quite a thing. The $25 at the door ($20 in advance) is really nothing to pay to be put in a place between madness, trance and ecstasy.

Wednesday, Juneteenth

RampArt Skatepark is holding a hip hop show tonight at 8 p.m. hosted by local artist Attribute and the lineup looks like it’s well worth a midweek getdown. Top of the roster is Krazyie Bone, a key player and founding member of seminal ’90s hip hop mavericks Bone Thugs-n-Harmony, as well as affiliated rapper “Big” Sloan Bone and Bone Thugs official DJ Pozition. Also on the bill is special guest Emcee Radio Active, as well as Kemistree, DJ L Boogie, All’Love Aundrea and Mona Loki. Door tickets are $25, and for $10 more you can get a VIP upgrade that includes drink tickets and choice seating. Food will be sold — I have heard barbecue — and there will also be a full bar. If you have it in you for a Juneteenth hip hop celebration of Hump Day, this is the spot.

The Importance of Bad Boys: Ride or Die

screens@northcoastjournal.com

BAD BOYS: RIDE OR DIE. I was prepared to blame prevailing global conditions as much as my own skepticism for sleeping on Bad Boys for Life (2020) as long as I did. In sitting to revisit the franchise and attempt to organize my thoughts about it, though, I discovered that I could not, in fact, attribute my truancy to the pandemic. No, it was long months before, when some of us thought the world might end for entirely different reasons, that chapter three in the saga of detectives Lowery (Will Smith) and Burnett (Martin Lawrence) took its bow.

And so we must defer only to my own bad attitude about the integrity of a sequel so many years on and in the hands of unknown (to me) directors, with aging stars whose recent performances had been underwhelming, to explain my not having seen the thing until almost four years later. When I finally did, though, I was welcomed back into the hyper-stylized, foul-mouthed, cordite-tinged world of an invented Miami I had once known and loved so well. (The DVDs of Bad Boys, 1995, and Bad Boys II, 2003, look down on me from the shelf as I type.) As such, I was forced to examine my own shifting, misplaced attitudes about something that had, for years, brought me something like joy.

As with so many objects of fascination found in youth, maturation can prove a corrosive and complicating influence. The aphorism that one must put aside childish things, even if we strain to disbelieve it, is reinforced by the daily rigors of "growing up" and many of us mistakenly, in our attempts to evolve a sense of art and self and the world, conflate simple enjoyment with simple-mindedness. In that middle period, the thrashing that precedes the calm of beginning to not give a damn about the aesthetic opinions of culture at large, it can be all too easy to conflate complexity or thematic heaviness with importance. It's the trainwreck of outside influence and the self, and it can apparently take a lifetime to sift through the wreckage, much less undo the damage.

Quite a bit of pseudo-academic posturing and philosophical gymnastics in service of a bunch of movies about ultra-violent cops. But there is something about the continued life of the Bad Boys canon, about the rediscovery of visceral thrills and vertiginous camera work, that grounds the movies in freedom of simple pleasures, but also continues to elevate the form. Maybe big, dumb movies, well-executed, support an ecosystem that makes room for small, smart ones.

One of the many knotty roots of this conundrum, of course, is the 800-pound gorilla of big dumb movies done well: Michael Bay. As much pleasure as we all derived from his early work (Bad Boys chief among them), his increasingly grody public persona, the accounts of his not-so casual misogyny and the overbearing self-seriousness of his middle and late periods has quickly begun to overshadow it. It has become, I think, a toxic rite of passage for film bros to recoil from and then re-embrace Bay and his movies, but there's not enough space to wade into that swamp here. My feelings remain complicated but I must admit that Bay, as a stylist, did as much to define the American cinema of the modern era as anybody. Springing, as so many directors did, from the music video generation, Bay invented a visual language that has been as frequently cribbed and shaded as Spielberg's lens-flares, Tarantino's speeches and Meyers' kitchens. He's problematic and egocentric; what could better define American movies?

And who better to interpret his influence than a couple of Belgians (Adil El Arbi and Bilal Fallah) who grew up on it. The directing duo have found a way, with drones aplenty, to carry the Bay torch without simply copying the moves and, through the cosmic luck of high finance, have been able to do it with the full cooperation of Smith (did I say problematic?) and Lawrence.

In practical terms, defunding is more about reallocating resources to non-policing entities that deliver social, health and other services to cope with issues like mental illness and homelessness.

Bad Boys: Ride or Die

To be clear, there are limits to this apologia. The plots of Bad Boys movies are not and have never been particularly burdened by sophistication, nor have the characters been particularly susceptible to change. As case in point, the entire tone and arc of Ride or Die are pretty much laid out in the trailer. But we're not really showing up for surprises in this case, are we? I should hope not. For those who have or will, I don't understand but I hope your disappointment might be tempered by the old-school, grand-scale silliness of what you saw. Sure, the climax isn't quite as climactic as it could be (just like the last time out), but it may be part of the pleasure of the enterprise that it can actually leave us wanting more, at least more than it makes us want to leave. Executed at Eureka, Humboldt County, California, on May 22nd, 2024. Published in the North Coast Journal on June 6th, 13th & 20th, 2024.

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL
TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3361, 3362

Pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code 3691 and 3692.4, the following conditions will, by operation of law, subject real property to the Tax Collector's power to sell.

1) All property for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for five or more years.

Note: The power to sell schedule for nonresidential commercial property is three or more years of tax-defaulted status, unless the county adopts, by ordinance or resolution, the five-year tax default schedule.

2) All property that has a nuisance abatement lien recorded against it and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

3) Any property that has been identified and requested for purchase by a city, county, city and county or nonprofit organization to serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

The parcels listed herein meet one or more of the criteria listed above and thus, will become subject to the Tax Collector's power to sell on July 1, 2024, at 12:01 a.m., by operation of law. The Tax Collector's power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to close of business on the last business day in June. The right to an installment plan terminates on the last business day in June, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at close of business on the last business day prior to the date of the sale by the Tax Collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request, by Amy Christensen, Humboldt County Tax Collector, 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, CA 95501, (707)476-2450.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of June 2024, is shown opposite the assessment/parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel/Assessment Number (APN/ASMT), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the Assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map, if applicable, and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The Assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's office.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 916-939-0772 or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case PFI-242001. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 916-939-0772, or visit this internet website www.nationwideposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case PFI-242001 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid, by remitting the funds and affidavit described in Section 2924m(c) of the Civil Code, so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. Catherine Ellen Barnes

August 31, 1950- March 13, 2024

Catherine Ellen Barnes went to do God’s Laundry, her departing flight was out of Eureka, CA. She loved the sensation of flight, as she would bungee jump over the waters of Mexico. Born in Long Beach, CA to Betty Jean Hubbard (Barnes /McElhill) and Philip Barnes, she spent time as a young person fishing in Humboldt County with her Grandmother Harriet “Jane” Hubbard. Having raised her daughters Wendi D. Wood, Deborah L. Hart, & Karyn B. Hart in Martinez, CA, children of her marriage to Gregory E. Hart, she moved to Eureka in 1996 to enjoy the ocean with her Grandchildren Kelli Wood, Kevyn Harris, Dylan Hart Arnold and Gage Hart Arnold.

Being an excellent cook, she taught them how to run a proper kitchen and make pies. Any child under her influence emerged with excellent comprehension of the English language. She loved babies and considered her job done when they were able to speak in complete sentences. The friends of her children were taken under her wing as family, most notably Missy Ferguson.

As a woman of many great talents, best known publicly for her masterful capacity in Physical Therapy, Fitness Instruction, Massage Therapy, and Paralegal Services. Catherine retired from the City of Eureka after her years as a Fitness Instructor at the Adorni Center and also was a member of the team at The Spa Personal Choice, certified in Swedish and Esalon Massage earned at The McKinnon Institute. Known personally for her ability to laugh at every challenge life lobbed her way.

Cat always landed on her feet.
Survived by Marge Barnes, Mark and Jeanette Barnes, children, grandchildren, nephew Phillip and nieces Marcy, Valerie, and Camila.
Brother Mark Barnes says:
My sister was at her best when she was caring for others... which was especially evident when she was caring for the elderly in the latter stages of their earthly lives. This was her special gift.

Her daughters would say their mother took doing laundry to an art form. Those of you who knew Catherine, Cathy, Cat personally will need no interpretation of these thoughts and instructions of hers, to be read upon her passing. The rest of you... just try to follow along.

- “I have gone on to do God’s laundry and offer a massage if one is wanted”
 - “At my passing, in lieu of flowers, go to Bed Bath and Beyond and buy yourself a present.”
 - “Cancel all my book and movie clubs... immediately!”
 - “Bury me in this cooking apron.”
 - “Bury me wearing these green gardening gloves.”
 - “After settling my affairs, if there is any money left over, spend it buying booze for my memorial.”
 - “I love to eat.”
 - “If you insist on having a memorial, make it a potluck and use real plates, knives and forks. No plastic allowed.”
 - “When it’s time to go... it’s time to go!”
- And lastly, this joke found amongst her files...
- “When I die, I want to go peacefully, like my grandfather did, in his sleep. Not yelling and screaming like the passengers in his car.” - Will Rogers

No public service will be held. We invite you to privately celebrate and honor her as you wish. Read a book. Laugh with the funny pages. Touch high quality textiles. Walk the beach. Go fishing. Eat great food. Swim. Grow plants. Watch the birds. If you wish, support Friends of the Redwood Library, Food for People, The Rescue Mission or Hospice of Humboldt.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF CAERWEN WILLIAMS CASE NO. PR2400140

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of CAERWEN WILLIAMS
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner RICHARD JAMES WILLIAMS
The petition for probate requests that RICHARD JAMES WILLIAMS be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.)
The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on June 20, 2024 at 1:31 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 4, Room: 4

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250.
